Shadows of Endurance portrays two centuries of American history through stratified layers of time, comparing the lives of the people currently living in Harlan County with the plethora of oral histories collected and recorded by Italian author, Alessandro Portelli, over 30 years of field research. The film is a journey through different times, each with their ghosts and voices, as distant echoes of a bygone age, re-emerging today in the places and faces explored by the camera. Through a series of encounters, the film introduces the stories of people struggling to survive in an area stripped of its identity.
